June 11 Showcase – Ben Hamblin

By Dan Grove and Ben

It's been five long years since Ben's last showcase, and he's been entering the drawing consistently for quite a while – proof of no Folk Club presidential perks. He thought about having TM Hanna, the biggest showcase winner of all time, fill out the entry for him to increase his chances. He was filling out his entry last time, but Beth told him his name was already entered. He thought maybe his wife Gail put one in 'cause she was so tired of hearing him complain. But no, it was Barb Keeler whose mojo got working this time – she filled out the form for Ben and as luck would have it TM was the one who drew his winning entry from the bucket.

As luck would have it, after winning the showcase Ben's team at work got a Request for Proposal (RFP), due June 4th, which means he's been working very long hours. He's not sure at this point if he'll be solo or have musical support on June 11, but there's sure to be a variety of song styles, including a song written by Bonnie Raitt, another from a Renee Fleming album, a song in praise of music, and an instrumental written by a traveling Spanish guitarist. Oh, and "one song...for the heck of it," which adds mystery (and a hint of danger?). He believes in eclecticism in music, that the more different juxtapositions the better. If you don't like what he's playing, wait a few minutes. ☺

Ben loves to sing, but is aware that his voice is undergoing a natural changing process (NOT a natural aging process – he's in denial). So he cannot soar quite as high as he could once, but believes you will enjoy the flight if you can make it.

Ben and his wife Gail left New England in 1996, eager to escape the winters. They chose this area, and now live in Reston. Ben works at General Dynamics IT, and is using his technical skills at the Folk Club, too, where he's one of our top sound engineers. He is very glad to have discovered the Folk Club, a group of free spirits who love music, support each other, and love to share it with each other.

Ben also has a challenge for us, asking:

What musician said (and don't Google it):

1) "Wrong is right!"

2) "But the pauses between the notes - ah, that is where the art resides!"

(The editor's non-Google'd best guess is Yogi Berra and Sherlock Holmes.)

Don't miss Ben's first showcase in years – I don't know if he's taking requests, but here's one for Elvis' "One Night!"

ROUND MOUNTAIN, the two-man folk singing orchestra based in Santa Fe, is named after a mountain peak at the apex of the Pecos Valley, on whose grassy slopes brothers Char and Robby Rothschild played as children. The mountain is a gentle place of rest at the threshold of the high country of the Truchas peaks.

Elder brother Char studied music since age 8, eventually finding his own voice as he traveled from Egypt to Ireland in 1996, and to Tokyo in 1997 playing for the Old Moscow Circus. On stage, Char sings and plays accordion, guitar or dobro, together with trumpet or Bulgarian gaida, and also highland bagpipes. He has studied trumpet with Paul Yutaka Tobe of the Japan Philharmonic, and Zahir Ramadanov of Ansambl Teodosievski.

Younger brother Robby has also studied many forms of music with teachers around the world and has performed with Thomas Mapfumo, Guinean griot Prince Diabate, and Ottmar Liebert. He has a Masters Degree in Composition from the University of New Mexico. Onstage, he sings and plays percussion - the West African djembe and Peruvian cajon and also plays the West African harp known as the kora, as well as the Irish bouzouki.

Round Mountain exudes a lively mixture of ceremony and irreverence, of exuberance and reflection. In a time when most music has become so brightly polished that no one can see inside, Round Mountain is a rare authentic gem of music that glows from within. On this tour, the brothers celebrate the release of their fourth studio album, The Goat, which features folk legend Andy Irvine and Anais Mitchell among other guest musicians.

MUSICAL NOTES

Folk Club gets a new Booking Agent

After 5 years of tremendous work as our procurer of concert performers, we all bid a VERY fond farewell to Chris "Fang" Harnage for her remarkable efforts. We now welcome Jim Clark as the new impresario for our monthly concert nights. Jim brings with him an eclectic and sometimes humorous appreciation of music, and is known as one of the founding members of the Harley String Band (perhaps they'll get a concert night now!).

Jim gained some notoriety at The Club a few years back, when he wrote a tune called "They Say it Cost a Dollar", a delightful and inventive homage lampooning our Tortilla Factory environment, and some of our most notable (or notorious) regulars. Jim says he's thinking about updating the tune for our new home.

Read more about Jim on the Club Info page of our web site, and get ready for more great concert performances here at the Amphora!
